STRONG ARM GANGS WORK FAIR TRAINS

DR. BOODY, IOWA DOCTOR, IS LATEST VICTIM OF
"FRAME-UP"

Olathe, Kan., June 1.—Strong arm gangs of men and women are "working" trains between Chicago and Frisco. Dr. F. W. Boody, a physician of Eldora, Ia., is at Hotel Olathe recovering from serious injuries which he says he sustained by being thrown through a window of a rapidly moving eastbound passenger train. Dr. Boody was found wandering about in a field near Clare, a station on the Santa Fe, six miles southwest of Olathe, last night. He was bleeding profusely from a number of cuts on his head, face and hands. Sheriff Carroll took him to Gardner for medical treatment and brought him to Olathe this morning. His injuries will compel him to stay here two or three days.

Dr. Boody is somewhat dazed even yet, but tells a fairly clear story. He says he was returning from San Francisco and that he was accused by three men on the train of insulting their woman companion. He was told, he declares, that unless he gave over a large sum of money he would be arrested at the next town. He would not consent to be mulcted and according to his statement the men threw him bodily through the window of the fast moving train.

Farmers found broken glass near where he says he was thrown in the mud. On his person was $200 cash, $50 in drafts and a pass book showing a credit of $6,000 in his home town. His ticket read from San Francisco to Eldora.

Dr. Boody is 47 years old, 6 feet tall and weighs 170 pounds. He has a family at Eldora.

If you have the itch, don't scratch. It does not cure the trouble and makes the skin bleed. Apply BAL-LARD'S SNOW LINIMENT. Rub it in gently on the affected parts. It relieves itching instantly and a few applications removes the cause thus performing a permanent cure. Price 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle. Sold by Owl Drug Store.

"It must have been about this time that my father died. My mother was never very strong and what with the shock of my father's death and all, she was unable to work for a time."

"My brother Syd and I were sent to the poorhouse."
"English people have a great horror of the poorhouse; but I don't remember it as a very dreadful place. To tell you the truth, I don't remember much about it. I have just a vague idea of what it was like."
"The strongest recollection I have of this period of my life is of creeping off by myself at the poorhouse and pretending I was a very rich and grand person."

The Highland.
The Highland will present 6 reels and four complete pictures Tuesday night.

Samson at the Lyric.
Fox will present Frohman's great play, "Samson," on Wednesday.

IT'S A RELIGIOUS DUTY TO HUG AND KISS WOMEN

BUT STERN JUDGE DOES NOT

AGREE WITH PREACHER'S BELIEF

Richmond, Ind., June 1.—When Rev. Rudolph Callison, an Evangelist who is suing his wife of 30 years for divorce, denied on cross examination in circuit court that he had been guilty of improper conduct with his organist, Rev. Margaret Buck, as Mrs. Callison had testified, the correspondent, Mrs. Buck became hysterical and her shrieks caused Judge Fox to place his hands over his ears and then order the woman removed from the court room. After Mrs. Buck had been taken to an ante room her screams still continued to interrupt the court proceedings.

"I've had enough of this," remarked Judge Fox, waving Callison off the witness stand. "Find for the defendant. The divorce is not granted."

The court was then informed that Rev. Mrs. Buck was in a trance, and Callison was called upon to restore the woman to normal mentality, which he did promptly and effectively, whereupon Callison and Rev. Mrs. Buck departed singing "Hallelujah," while other members of the Callison following hugged and kissed one another.

Mrs. Callison testified that her husband was entirely too attentive to certain women members of his following, particularly Mrs. Buck. Callison said his wife was in the habit of interrupting his meeting by denouncing him as a Don Juan, and had accused him of preaching the gospel so as to be in the company of women.

Callison also informed the court that he regarded it a religious duty to hug and kiss women belonging to his sect.

Wanda Callison, who lives with her mother in Ft. Wayne, was in court. The girl clapped her hands when she realized that her father's suit for divorce had failed. She had been witness for both her mother and father. She went to her father and shook his hand and kissed him after the decision was announced. She persuaded him to go to his wife and shake hands with her.

JEFFERSON DAVIS IS GIVEN PRAISE BY GEN. GREEN

presidency and was greatly disappointed that he had been elected. The provisional government having expired Feb. 22, 1862, the confederate congress re-elected Mr. Davis to the presidency.

Gen. Green referred to Davis' conduct of affairs of the confederacy, of his efforts on behalf of the soldiers of the South and on behalf of prisoners of war of both the North and the South, of the removal of Mr. Davis and his cabinet from Richmond to points farther south, as the Union forces closed about them, and of the receipt by Davis of news of the surrender of the Confederate generals.

"At Washington, Georgia, Mr. Davis received the first official information of the surrender of Gen. Joseph E. Johnston," continued the speaker. "He at once ordered the secretary of war to pay off the soldiers and dismissed all of his military escort, asking for only ten volunteers to accompany him. He formally dissolved his cabinet and told each member to look out for his own safety. Mr. Davis intended to go west and cross the Chattahoochee and attempt to fall in with troops in Alabama and so cross the Mississippi and join Gen. E. K. Smith and continue the war on that side of the river with the ultimate purpose that the seceded states should return to the United States with all rights of the states unimpaired."

"Three days after leaving Washington, Mr. Davis found his family encamped with a small wagon train and traveled several days with them. He still intended to cross the Mississippi. He had his horse saddled one night and he laid down to rest shortly before dawn. Soon afterward his negro coachman reported to him that he heard firing nearby. Mr. Davis left his tent, and saw some Union cavalrymen. His wife urged him to escape. His horse was hitched nearby. As it was still dark he picked up in the tent what he thought was his raincoat, and later found it was his wife's. Mrs. Davis threw a shawl over his shoulders to protect him from the cool morning air. He had advanced from the tent but a few steps when he was ordered to halt. Mr. Davis threw off the raincoat and shawl and advanced upon the trooper but his wife rushed up and threw her arms about him and there was nothing to do but surrender. Many false statements have been made by his enemies as to the dress he wore when arrested but Mr. Davis' soldierly character and courage give the lie to all such stories and those of his household who were present bore him out in his statement that he wore a gentleman's morning wrapper."

Gen. Green related stories of Mr. Davis' life in Fortress Monroe as a prisoner of the United States and quoted statements of a former physician concerning the prisoner's patience and gentleness during his confinement. General Green told of Davis' release from Fort Monroe, of his going to Canada and in closing said:

"President Johnson's anxiety to convict Jefferson Davis of treason was such that he employed the greatest criminal lawyers of the age to assist the attorney general in his investigation of the case. Johnson also sent for the chief justice of the United States supreme court and asked him to look into the matter on the part of the United States. If ever there was a partisan it was Salmon P. Chase, but at that time he was a great lawyer and an honest, fearless man."

"Lincoln," said Chase, "wanted Jefferson Davis to escape and he was right. His capture was a mistake, his trial will be a greater one. We can not convict him of treason. Secession is settled; let it stay settled."

"These words explained the vote of the great judge who would have quashed the indictment against Mr. Davis no less than they explained the question so often asked, 'Why was Jefferson Davis never tried for treason?' On Mr. Davis' return from Canada to Richmond for his trial, he was admitted to bail on bond which was signed by Horace Greeley and Gerritt Smith. The case against Jefferson Davis never was called in court."

George Coroneos, John Nicholas Coroneos and Peter Anagnos. The three defendants were charged with shipping interstate packages of brandy from A. E. Angel.

Philadelphia, Pa., to Pawhuska, Okla., without properly labeling the contents. One package came labeled "olive oil," and others came as "Greek products," stated the federal attorney. The case against George Coroneos was dismissed, but John Nicholas Coroneos and the other defendant pleaded guilty, the former being fined $600, which he paid, and the latter was fined $250, which he did not pay, and was remanded to jail in default of the fine. Anagnos was a restaurant keeper at Pawhuska, and the two Coroneos are liquor dealers in Philadelphia, Pa.

In the case of Harry Marlow, charged with larceny of interstate express packages, containing whisky billed from Wichita Falls to Lawton, the defendant was found guilty and sentenced to 90 days in jail.

The Jake Hamon case is docketed for trial at the Enid term of court. This is the sixth time the case has been postponed.
